Video Highlights

In this episode of MSC's Tooling Up, Toni Neary is joined by Brian Moseley, RA/QA Technical Manager at SHOWA Group for a discussion on the company's legacy of innovation and research as well as the invention of nitrile gloves.

To begin this episode, Brian shares his 20-year journey with SHOWA that started in the field of maintenance and has led him all the way to management in research and development. Throughout the interview, Brian shares his passion for preserving the environment for future generations through the innovations SHOWA has implemented since 2011.

Brian and Toni discuss the roots of SHOWA, as a Japanese family-owned business that has grown over the past 70 years into the innovative success that it is today. Brian highlights the company's deep respect and care for the environment throughout the majority of the episode by discussing some of the ingenious designs R&D has engineered. In fact, the company has developed a technology called Eco Best Technology that reduces the footprint SHOWA products are leaving on the world for decades to come.
